

The consolidation of media outlets discourages diversity in broadcasting. The FCC should cut back on the number of broadcast outlets a single conglomerate may own in order to foster competition, variety and the largest and most diverse group of voices possible.